Lena Burckhardt is a passionate free climber. Three times a week she trains at her local climbing gym so she can stay fit for her outdoor climbs. Her next goal? Red Rock Canyon in Nevada. When it comes to rock climbing, foresight, endurance and precision are crucial: „Every handhold has to be secure“, says the 33-year-old...

... Foresight, precision and endurance are also important in her professional life. This PhD biologist is currently leading a research project on epigenetics.

THE FUTURE OF WORK

“Rigid organisations are on the way out.”

How is our working world changing and what must we do to ensure we can keep up with new developments? Mark Frost, the Managing Director of Hays Austria, talks about taking networked action and confidently handling uncertainty.

>> How is the world of employment developing for professionals?

Frost: Professionals with an in-depth knowledge of a specialist area are, and will remain in the future, very highly sought after. But having a particular level of expertise is just one side of the coin. It is also becoming increasingly more important that individuals link their own expertise with that of experts in other fields. Digitisation is driving this forward and people will need to augment this with good communicative skills. Also, this ensures the markets move at a brisk pace: Whenever knowledge in a particular field becomes outmoded, specialists will need to be able to expand their skills and keep up to date. This requires constant learning, an open attitude and the ability to deal confidently with uncertainty.

>> Digitisation – so how is this going to change how we work?

Frost: It's going to accelerate our workplaces and connect them to new models with multiple external partners, who in turn will establish joint networks for creating added value. How quickly we can get enough specialists on board to handle these digital tasks is an exciting question. We can only answer this by taking into account many different social forces.

>> And how are our organisational structures changing?

Frost: Rigid, line organisations that control everything and have processes that are set in stone are on the way out. Flexible, agile models that enable swift and interconnected action are what is required. This is what characterises the project economy. In mixed teams, in which all involved departments cooperate closely, innovative approaches are best able to tackle and solve the complex challenges of the digital future.

>> What does this mean for the staffing needs of companies?

Frost: The different corporate divisions for the most part are still not working hand in hand when it comes to planning for and recruiting personnel. HR departments and individual departments often have different priorities for candidates. For instance, external self-employed workers, who are very common in many companies today, are generally not taken into consideration when recruitment planning takes place. In the future it will be necessary to tackle human resource planning together – with the involvement of all departments and, if necessary, using external partners.

>> What's happening with the recruitment of candidates?

Frost: As ever, a careful analysis of what recruitment channels provide the best access to the most desired candidates is a must. There are still very big differences in where and how engineers, financial experts and marketing professionals are found. Mobile recruitment will grow stronger. But our experience shows that not everything is covered by mobile and virtual options: Applicants want to speak to a real person as soon as possible during the application process. It's also just as important for companies to offer comprehensive and integrated recruitment solutions.

HAYS EFFECT CHECK

- ✓ Partnership: Developing the best solution – Together
- ✓ Thinking ahead: Setting the right course in staffing
- ✓ Security: Expert advice when it comes to law and compliance

“We will work in a much more interconnected and integrated way.”

Mark Frost,
Managing Director of Hays Austria

>> What will the workplace look like in five years?

Frost: Much more colourful and less organised. Old career models are being eschewed while at the same time we are moving to working more with projects and less with traditional positions and functions. We will work in a much more interconnected and integrated way and are slowly moving away from the silo mentality, because it blocks the opportunities afforded by a digitally networked world.

Engineering/ Construction & Property

A good foundation

Robots, automation, Internet 4.0 – the industrial sector is characterised by rapid developments and profound change. To ensure that companies can respond appropriately and overcome any challenges they may face, they are dependent on highly qualified personnel who can independently and creatively seek out new solutions while still working in a structured environment. We are a leading provider of engineering services. We can supply you with both qualified specialists and experienced generalists. You benefit from the expertise and experience of our candidates, who will help you to establish new partnerships and value-added networks.

Finance

Much more than just numbers

Lean processes and new digital business models – Even in the financial sector, networked thinking and IT expertise are in demand. As a part of digitisation, projects often come up that must be dealt with in addition to your normal daily business – and without increasing the head count for your permanent staff. This is just where we can help: We can find you the right financial experts who can competently support you with new tasks and seamlessly handle short-term projects. Those who can think ahead, are open to new ideas and can filter and interpret the information, are the people you need so you can be successful on the market. Thanks to our network of specialists, who also possess proven international experience, our consultants have the market know-how to quickly and reliably find the right solutions for your HR needs.

Life Sciences

Act locally, think globally

Hardly any business sector is so internationally interconnected as the pharma, medical technology and biotech industries. And these global players also require global thinking when it comes to recruitment. We have in-depth knowledge of the industry and its actors and so can always find the most appropriate person to fill any role – particularly when you're looking for specialists with niche expertise. We can also offer you a contract model that best suits your requirements and, using Hays Talent Solutions, a complete package of services covering your every recruitment need.

Sales & Marketing

Real-time experts

Social media, mobile devices, real-time interaction – when communicating with customers, these days it's all about rapid responses and a confident appearance. We have the specialists that can make that much needed connection between brand, technology and customers. A maximum of 48 hours after we have carried out your needs analysis, we will present you with the appropriate sales and marketing experts to meet your needs. And we can do this worldwide. You select the appropriate contract model and benefit from the knowledge transfer of specialists in your existing teams.

Information Technology

Specialists for any niche

Niche skills and a shortage of specialist personnel – For companies these days it's a real challenge to find the right IT experts. While the tasks within companies are becoming increasingly more complex and require highly specialised know-how, the range of available experts is also becoming increasingly scarcer. This is exactly where we can help: We can find you the right experts for every assignment – regardless of how specialised that may be. Our candidates can quickly get up to speed and can be both swiftly and flexibly deployed in terms of time and location. In addition, we also offer advice on the best type of contract to choose so that your legal compliance is assured.

- Experts for complex tasks
- Flexible deployment options
- Legal advice on the right type of contract
